ACTION REQUEST

ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Academic Calendar for 2008-2009

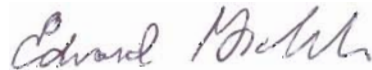

The following principles influence the academic calendar on the Ann Arbor campus:

- The number of class days in the fall term should be as close as possible to the number of class days in the winter term. Fall 2008 has 67 class days and Winter 2009 has 69 days.
- Classes should not begin before September 1. Starting classes in August would lead to significant problems for both students and faculty.
- Fall classes begin on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in September, to ensure starting after Labor Day. Winter classes start the first Wednesday after the first Monday, in order to start after January 2nd.
- Spring break should fall on the eighth week of winter term so that schools and colleges have the option of completing seven-week mini-courses before break.
- The term end date in both the fall and winter is the Tuesday of the 15th week, followed by a single study day before exams start on Thursday and Friday. Exams continue to through the Thursday of the 16th week.

The attached calendar has been shared with many faculty and administrative groups and meets the established criteria.

I am writing to request its approval.

Respectfully submitted,

Edward M. Gramlich, Interim
Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs

Regents Meeting, May 2006

Background for Academic Calendar 2008-2009

Holiday Issues

There are no conflicts with religious holidays in this calendar.

Spring Break

The spring break in 2009 falls as it traditionally has on the eighth week of the winter term. The Ann Arbor Public School District often tries to coordinate its Spring Break with that of the University, but the school system does not yet have a contract for 2009.

Number of Class Days

Fall term has 67 days; winter has 69 class days. This is within the acceptable range of 67-69 class days per term.

Frequently Asked Questions

This calendar reflects the tradition of starting the Tuesday after Labor Day in order to allow time for a two-day study break in October.
